Practical Cyber Workshop: are you prepared for a cyber-attack?

Do you have cyber security concerns? Are you worried about how your business will be perceived if you have a breach? And do your employees know which threats they need to keep an eye on? Operating under Chatham House rules, Todd Gifford and Alex Jukes from Optimising IT host a workshop discussion with a number of businesses who have specific questions or concerns around Cyber and information security related matters. The Session is open to business owners and key decision stakeholders who would like to explore the matters that they perceive as risks, and potential risks that may not have been acknowledged. The discussion will be held under strict Chatham House rules to allow sensitive and significant business issues to be aired without reputational risk to those present.

Todd Gifford

Having clocked up almost two decades in IT, Todd has spent 13 of them operating in information security related positions. With professional qualifications such as Certified Information Systems Security Professional (CISSP), ISO27001 Lead Auditor and PCI DSS expertise, Todd has experience working within both the public and private sector. Todd is now taking a holistic approach to delivering Cyber and Information Security consultancy, and implementation of compliancy measures for multi-site/multi-national public and private organisations.
