WiFi – It's as important as oxygen for your business

In an era where WiFi is the default method to connect to our networks, WiFi has become as important as Oxygen for business. Enabling a fully digital experience in a workplace is challenging for businesses. Many of us now provide WiFi services for corporate and guest users, yet controlling access is now critical. In this session we will consider how to manage the demands of providing mission critical mobility services and securing access where an increasing number of IoT devices are entering the workplace.

Paul Hiscox

Paul has over 15 years of experience working with mobility solutions across many sectors and is the currently the mobility expert at ITEC Connect Ltd. Paul has seen the world of Wi-Fi grow into mission critical services for the private and public sectors. Understanding the technical requirements alongside the demands of users, Paul has designed and deployed hundreds of mobility networks. With a passion for Wi-Fi and user experience, his recent certification of "Mobile Engagement and Analytics Professional" illustrates the changing requirements of Wi-Fi in the workplace.
